Did you know? Bumblebees use sonic movement to pollinate. Referred to as sonication or “buzz pollination,” they rapidly vibrate their flight muscles to release firmly attached pollen. This highly efficient sonication produces a buzzing sound that you can hear. Beating their wings around 130 times per second or more, bumblebees can create powerful vibrations that won’t harm delicate flowers. So, imagine what 200 times per second of sonic movement can do for releasing dirt, oil, impurities, makeup and pollutants from skin!

POWER STATEMENT:

60 seconds to superior sonic clean

Skinvigorate Sonic™ Skin Care System removes four times more dirt, oil, impurities, makeup and pollutants — including tiny pollution particles known as PM2.5 — than hand-cleansing!<sup>1</sup> And with three speeds and the ability to add the Skinvigorate Sonic™ Facial Massage Head, you can customize your routine for the ultimate skin care experience.

See for yourself! The before-and-after photos below show how much you might be leaving behind when hand-cleansing alone.
